

Preston University

Abstract of Graduation Thesis for the Degree of Master

A Structural and Functional Analysis of the City Community Sanitation Service system

Name: Kong Ruilin

Major: Business Management

Concentration: Urban Community Health Service

Tutor: Professor Zhang Shangren

Affiliate: China Advanced Studies & Research University

《A STRUCTURAL AND FUNCTIONAL ANALYSIS OF THE CITY COMMUNITY SANITATION SERVICE SYSTEM》

---- Abstract ----

This analysis is written with the reference to some relevant books and information with combination of the author understands in his working experience. In the analysis, the government, large or medium-sized comprehensive hospitals, special hospitals and the community sanitation service organizations are made into a community service system, which is regarded as a unit. The systematic structural functional analysis and empirical method are introduced to analyze the systematic structural function in the community sanitation service system.

Based on our country's sanitation situation, this research analyzes the reason, status quo and the advantages to develop city community sanitation service at the present time and the main binding factors on its development. And its multiple functions and effects are discussed on the national politics, economy and society. It is studied in details on the functions of our government at all levels, the market mechanism, large or medium-sized comprehensive hospitals, special hospitals, the community sanitation service organizations and some other social organizations. It is argued that the holistic function of the community sanitation service system has a very close relationship with its environment. They interact on each other. It is illustrated that the effective function of each essential systematic factor is indispensable to the full play of its holistic function. It puts forward some important strategies and measures from different angles. It is to be proved that holistic function is not simply the sum-up of those of each factor, but much greater. Only when the function of each essential factor is fully played can the whole system operate effectively. It is pointed out that both governmental macro-manipulation and the micromanipulation of market mechanism are indispensable to the system. It is advocated that the positive and negative experience should be used fully for reference to develop the city community sanitation service and that the policies and strategies must be enacted in accordance with the practical circumstances of our country. It is advised that the system should advance as a whole with some breakthroughs in some key issues at one time. It is stressed that developing the city community sanitation service needs the involvement of the whole society and that the function of the government is extremely important.

Key Words: City Community Sanitation Service System. Structural and Functional Analysis